No to coercion and violence - Yes to dialogue

We, the silent majority, men and women from all ends of the social spectrum, call on the entire political system, coalition and opposition alike, and the public that supports .or opposes the reform, to stop the ever-increasing deterioration

We have known many disputes in our 75 years of existence
.and know how to resolve them

On the other hand, we have seen where coercion and violence bring us and where an .estrangement between segments of our nation has brought us

The discussion surrounding judicial reform may go beyond the limits of legitimate .discourse, and we fear it will spiral the State of Israel into a civil war, God forbid

.The time to talk is now
